Renzacci UK office manager Vanessa King shows off the company's new dedicated computer servers for the company's technical department. The system, commissioned specifically for Renzacci by Dell Computers, is part of investment of well over £10,000 into communications technology that has included supplying Vodafone Business email for all engineers ensuring full office contact is maintained no matter where the individual is located geographically.

"We see investment in technology as part of our commitment to offer the best service package possible for our clients," says Renzacci UK managing director, Jason Alexander. "This system not only has the capability to allow our engineers to obtain technical diagrams and information whilst on site, but also allows us to accurately track our engineers and utilize their time to the best advantage, not only for our clients, but for us as well. We hope that the investment will help us maintain our reputation for the fastest possible response to calls and enquiries."
