

RENZACCI UK PLC

PRESS RELEASE

Issue Date :3RD February 2006

Header :Government Minister Feels The Heat

The Minister of State for Industry, Alan Michaels, warmed to the team at Zeds Drycleaners in Bexley on a recent 'walkabout' around the town's businesses with Deputy Mayor, Cllr Kathryn Smith.

"The Minister wanted to visit a small business and spent some time looking around my shop," says owner Jim Leak. "It was a freezing day and I think they were glad to get out of the cold!"

Zeds was first set up by Jim ten years ago after a career in government accounting. The shop was fully commissioned by Renzacci UK plc, which continues to supply and service the business. Crossword fan, Jim, opted for the unusual name to go with the shop's motto 'The very last word in Professional Drycleaning'.

"They were interested in all the equipment and asked questions about things worked and what they did. I was pleased to able to say that the machines had stood me in good stead," says Jim. "I could definitely recommend the industry as a choice for a second career!"

Pictured: Councillor Kathryn Smith, Alan Michaels, Jim Leake and friend at Jim Leake's shop, Zeds Drycleaners in Bexley, Kent.